2. Reasons for Revision

Regarding consolidated net sales for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2026, sales for the Healthcare market have been on a recovery trend in Europe, North America, and China. In the fourth quarter, no significant decline has been observed, and performance has remained solid. In Japan, although sales were weak due to the struggling operating environment for hospitals through the third quarter, the Company captured end-of-fiscal-year demand, and consolidated net sales are expected to exceed the previous forecast announced on January 30, 2026.

As a result, operating profit and ordinary profit are also expected to exceed the previously announced forecast.

Meanwhile, as assumed in the previous forecast, the Company expects to record approximately JPY 400 million in inventory write-downs at the end of the period as Cost of Sales for certain legacy models in the B&P market, where inventories have become excessive. Going forward, the Company will further proceed with reducing inventories of legacy models while accelerating the transition to competitive new models.

With respect to extraordinary income, the Company expects to record approximately JPY 6,600 million as gain on sales of investment securities in the fourth quarter.

With regard to extraordinary losses, it is expected that approximately JPY 450 million will be recorded as business restructuring expenses associated with the reorganization of the sales organization in Europe and the restructuring of certain development and production sites. In addition, we expect to record approximately JPY 500 million in impairment losses on fixed assets at a company based in Europe with development and manufacturing capabilities.

As a result, profit attributable to owners of the parent is expected to exceed the previously announced forecast.

(Dividend Forecast): There is no change to the previously announced dividend forecast (year-end dividend of JPY 55.00 per share) disclosed on May 8, 2025.

(Note): The above forecasts are based on information available as of the date of this announcement. Actual results may differ materially from the forecast figures due to various future factors.
